James Cracknell is one of Britain's most successful athletes of all time, with two Olympic Gold medals and six World Championship titles.

However, his desire to reinvent himself continues regardless of the major head injury, which he incurred when he was thrown off his bike in America whilst filming a TV show for the Discovery Channel. It is 14 years since his epic Olympic Gold in 2004 and James refuses to get a 'proper job.'

He has undertaken adventures with Ben Fogle, racing across The Atlantic, The South Pole and pushed himself to his limits once for charity, rowing The Channel; cycling down through France and Spain and finally swimming The Strait of Gibraltar, accompanied by comedian David Walliams.
